Important Update Regarding Tariff-Related Costs

First and foremost, we would like to thank you for your continued partnership with Vulcan Spring & Manufacturing Co. We value the trust you place in our team and remain committed to supporting your business with the quality, reliability, and service you have come to expect from Vulcan Spring.

We understand that recent developments and discussions surrounding Section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 have raised questions about the current status of tariffs and whether tariff-related charges are still applicable.

While certain changes under Section 232 may impact other materials and products, they do not apply to the steel and raw materials Vulcan Spring purchases for our manufacturing operations. As a result, we continue to incur tariff-related costs on our incoming materials.

What This Means for You

Tariff-related charges will continue to appear as a separate line item on invoices for affected products. These charges are directly related to the additional costs Vulcan Spring continues to incur on the materials required to manufacture finished products.

We recognize that managing costs remains important to our customers. Our team continues to evaluate material sourcing, manufacturing efficiencies, and other opportunities to help minimize the impact wherever possible. While we are unable to absorb these tariff-related costs in full, we remain committed to doing our part to keep costs as manageable as possible for our customers.

We will also continue to monitor changes in trade policy and their impact on the materials we purchase. Should applicable tariff requirements change in a way that affects our costs, we will evaluate those changes accordingly.

We greatly appreciate your continued partnership and understanding. If you have questions regarding tariff-related charges or how they may apply to your orders, please contact our team at (215) 721-1721.

Thank you for your continued trust in Vulcan Spring & Manufacturing Co. We look forward to continuing to support your business for many years to come.
